The 10-minute landing page clarity check

For founders and small businesses. Open your page, set a timer and make one useful change. This is an editorial check, not a conversion prediction.

01 / Name the thing you sell

- ☐ The headline names a recognisable product or service.
- ☐ It gives the intended customer a reason to keep reading.
- ☐ It avoids a claim that could describe almost any business.

Starting sentence: We help [specific customer] do [specific job] with [actual product or service]. Rewrite it naturally before publishing.

FICTIONAL TEACHING EXAMPLE - NOT CLIENT WORK

Before: Empowering your digital future.

After: Booking websites for independent hair salons.

02 / Make the next step predictable

- ☐ The button describes the action: view prices, request an audit or download.
- ☐ The visitor can tell whether it leads to a purchase, inquiry or call.
- ☐ One primary action is easy to find on mobile.

03 / Answer the buying questions

- [ ] What exactly is included?
- [ ] What does it cost? Is it a one-time or recurring charge?
- [ ] What must the customer supply before work begins?
- [ ] When does delivery start, and what does the customer receive?
- [ ] Where can the customer ask a question?

Settle unknown details before publishing. Do not invent delivery promises, revision allowances or refund policies.

04 / Replace decoration with evidence

Highlight three claims. Put the supporting fact beside each one. Remove or narrow unsupported claims.

- [ ] Show a working product or an accurately labelled demonstration.
- [ ] Use customer quotes only with permission.
- [ ] Label fictional examples; they are not case studies or testimonials.

05 / Run a mobile handoff check

- [ ] No clipped prices, buttons or text on a narrow screen.
- [ ] The primary CTA opens the destination its label describes.
- [ ] Product name, currency and charge frequency match the offer.
- [ ] The contact path and delivery explanation are easy to find.

Stop before submitting payment. Record checkout completion only when a legitimate transaction or authorised test confirms it.

Measure the step that changed

Impressions = seen. Outbound clicks = visits requested. Inquiries = interest. Confirmed paid orders = sales. Track these separately and record the change date. No traffic is not proof that an offer cannot sell.

Customer and the job they need done

Current headline

Clearer headline

Primary CTA and destination

Buying question to answer

Evidence you can honestly show

Metric and review date

Want a second pair of eyes?

Mini Audit / $120

A review of one page and five social posts, with tone issues, rewritten examples and practical recommendations. English and Polish.

Need the writing done? The existing $250 48-hour Gen-Z Content Fix covers one landing page, up to ten social captions, up to five ad hooks or CTAs and a mini voice guide. Delivery starts after the necessary materials are received.

View services: bynowak.com/services

Ask a question: business@bynowak.com